RELATIONWATCH RESEARCH BRIEF #13 · EMPLOYER EDITION

RW-RB-013

Published September 13, 2026

“Met at Workplace,”: Office romances, affairs, breakups, reported red flags, motives, and serious outcomes.

A fixed analysis of 305 public, verified cases tagged “Met at Workplace,” examining workplace romances, affairs, breakups, power-linked relationships, reported red flags, motives, and serious outcomes. The brief translates case-record patterns into practical, non-diagnostic guidance for employers, HR teams, security leaders, and employee-assistance professionals.

305 workplace-origin records | 26 extramarital | 5 love triangles | 139 explicit workplace narratives

305

workplace-origin cases

11.9% of 2571 public, verified RelationWatch records at publication.

31

affair or love-triangle status

26 extramarital relationships plus 5 love triangles (10.2%).

49

former or separated status

All originally met through a workplace; this status does not prove they still worked together when the relationship ended or the incident occurred. See the explanation below.

272

homicide-related incident type

89.2% of the cases studied on this page. RelationWatch focuses on serious incidents, so this does not mean 89.2% of workplace relationships lead to homicide.

What the 49 former or separated cases mean

These are workplace-origin relationships, not necessarily 49 active coworker relationships. Every record entered the cohort because it carried the structured origin tag “Met at Workplace.” The 49 figure then groups the later primary relationship statuses shown below. RelationWatch does not have a consistent structured field proving that both people still worked together at separation, that the breakup occurred at work, or that the workplace connection caused the later escalation.

Composition of the 49 cases

Ex-partners	19 cases · 38.8%
Separated	15 cases · 30.6%
Divorced	14 cases · 28.6%
Ex-husband	1 case · 2.0%

What was recorded alongside those statuses

Warning-sign tags overlap: one case can contain several. They show co-occurring coded observations, not a timeline or proof that separation—or meeting at work—caused an outcome.

Escalation Pattern / Violence	44 cases · 89.8%
Threats	40 cases · 81.6%
Divorce Pending / Recent Separation	37 cases · 75.5%
Manipulative behavior	29 cases · 59.2%
Stalking / Repeated Harassment	23 cases · 46.9%
Firearm Access / Concerning Weapon Behavior	16 cases · 32.7%

22 cases (44.9%) also contained explicit coworker, colleague, office-romance, or worked-together wording in the narrower automated narrative screen. Absence of that exact wording does not negate the structured “Met at Workplace” origin tag.

40 of the 49 records (81.6%) have a homicide-related incident type. That high proportion reflects RelationWatch's selected serious-case archive and must not be interpreted as the risk rate for workplace romances, breakups, former partners, or employees generally.

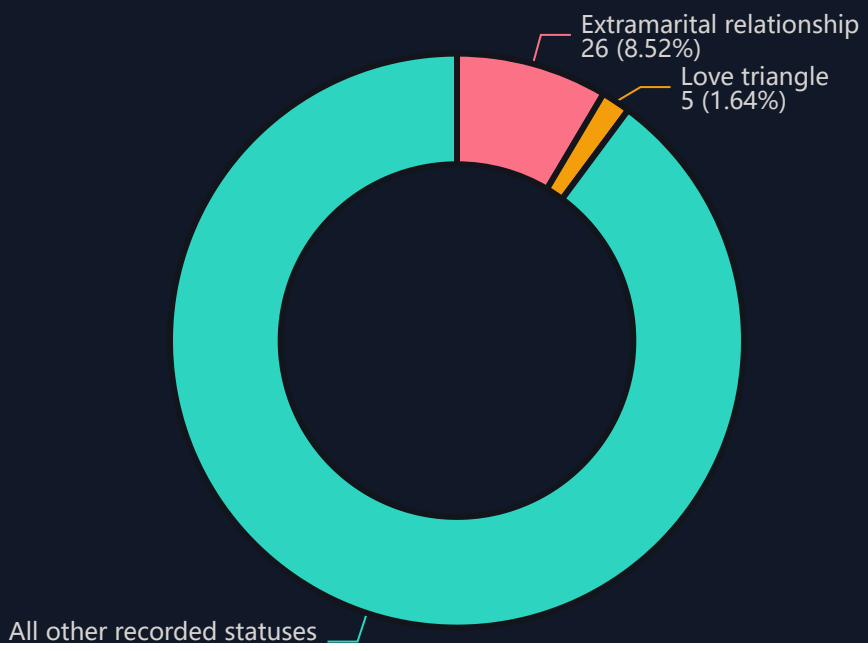

Direct Answer and Scope

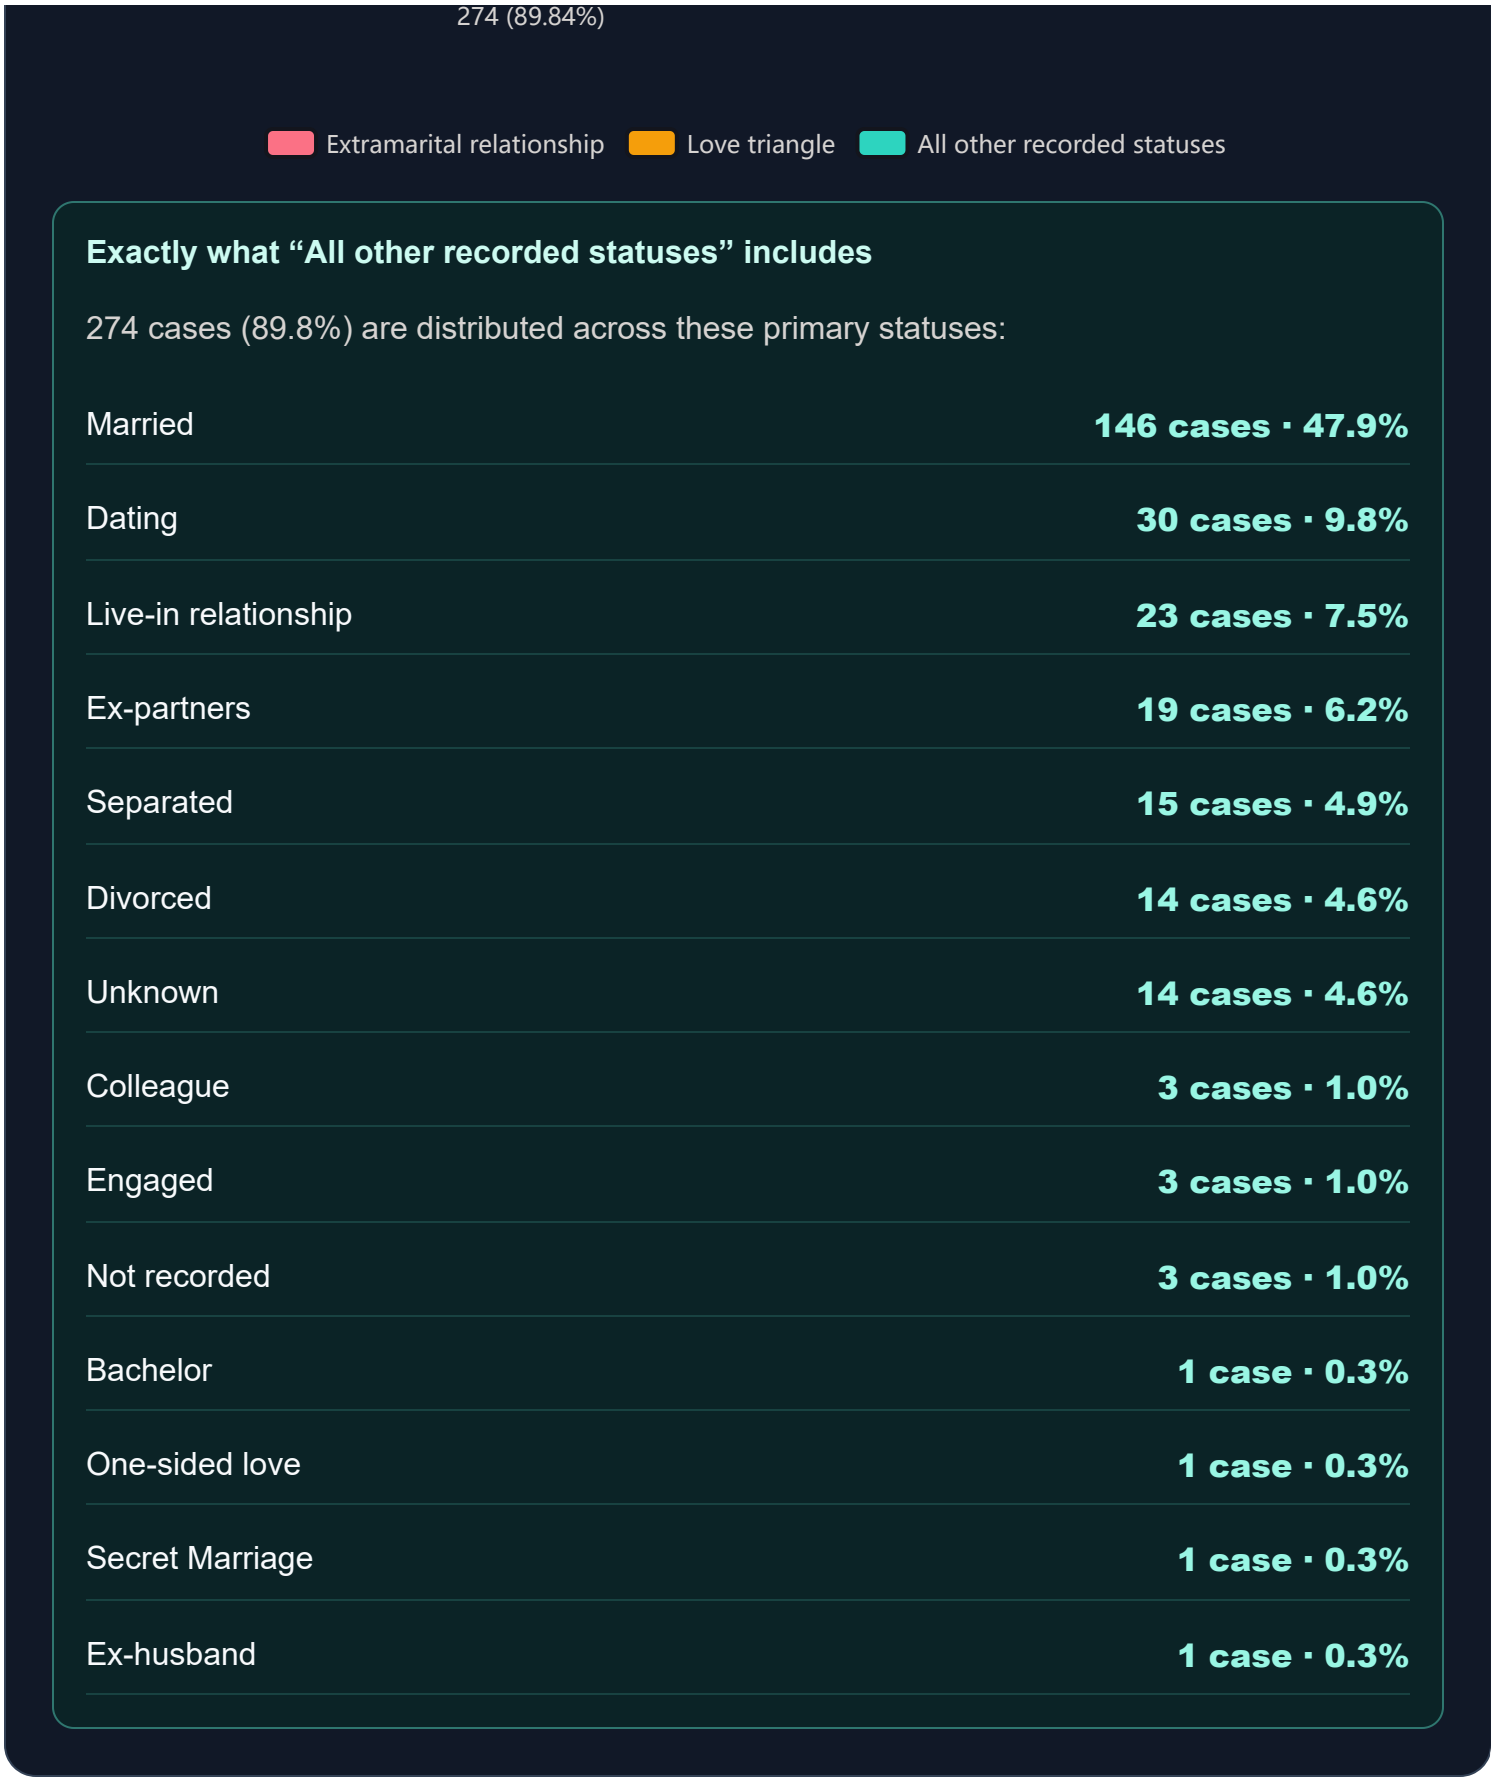

RelationWatch contained 305 public, verified cases carrying the structured "Met at Workplace" relationship-origin tag when this fixed snapshot was created. This is the broad, auditable workplace-connected cohort. A narrower text screen found explicit coworker, colleague, office-romance, employer–employee, superior–subordinate, or worked-together language in 139 records (45.6%). That secondary number is a machine-readable audit indicator, not a fully hand-adjudicated replacement for the structured cohort.

This archive is selected for serious relationship-connected incidents. It cannot estimate how often workplace relationships become harmful, and the presence of a workplace romance, affair, divorce, mental-health concern, or any single warning sign does not predict violence.

Extramarital relationships, love triangles, and all other statuses

These three slices are mutually exclusive and total 305. "All other recorded statuses" is a combined chart category—not a separate relationship status.

Exactly what “All other recorded statuses” includes

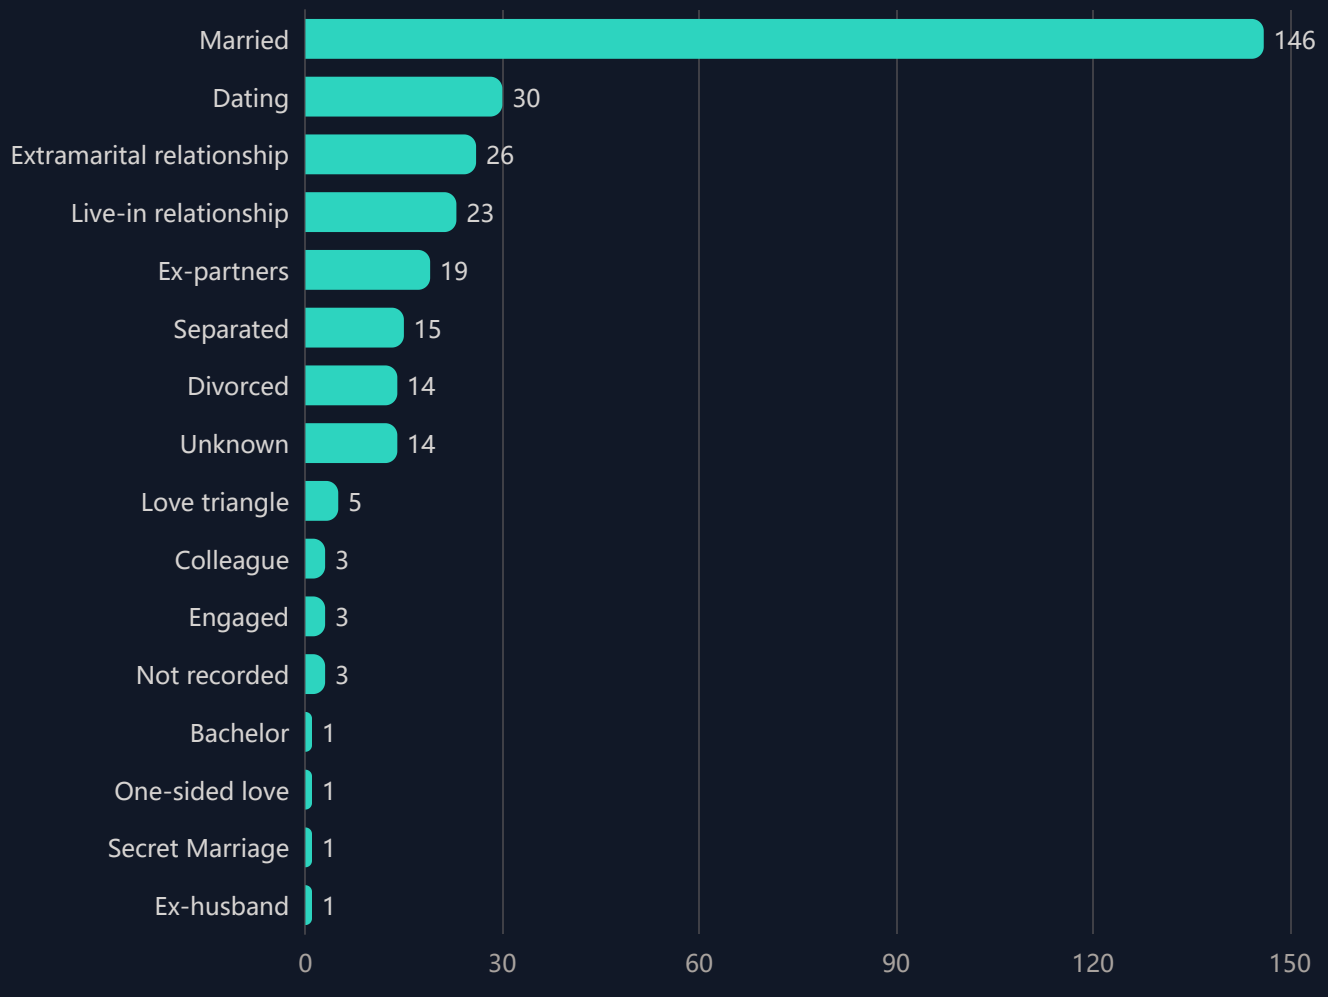

274 cases (89.8%) are distributed across these primary statuses:

Married	146 cases · 47.9%
Dating	30 cases · 9.8%
Live-in relationship	23 cases · 7.5%
Ex-partners	19 cases · 6.2%
Separated	15 cases · 4.9%
Divorced	14 cases · 4.6%
Unknown	14 cases · 4.6%
Colleague	3 cases · 1.0%
Engaged	3 cases · 1.0%
Not recorded	3 cases · 1.0%
Bachelor	1 case · 0.3%
One-sided love	1 case · 0.3%
Secret Marriage	1 case · 0.3%
Ex-husband	1 case · 0.3%

Full relationship-status distribution

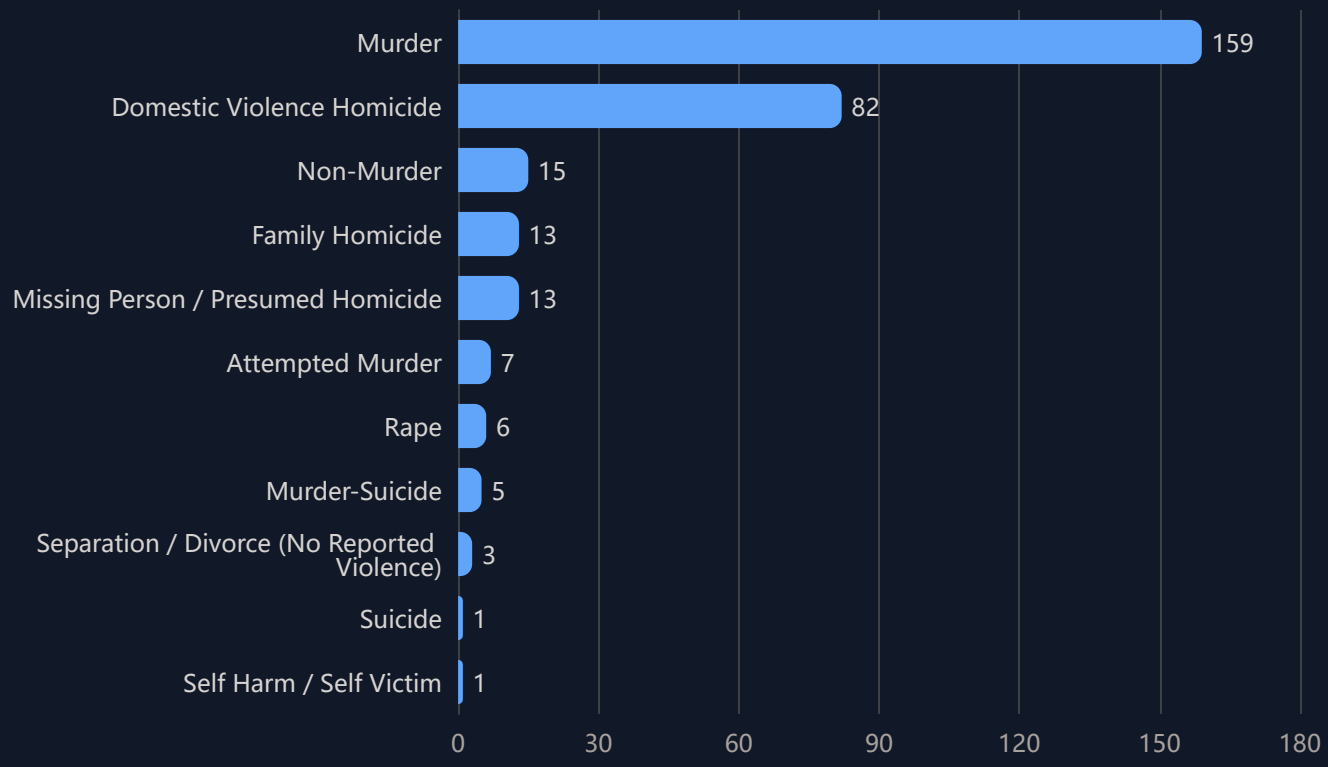

Every case appears once according to its primary structured relationship status.

Why are only three cases labeled “Colleague”? Short answer: “Met at Workplace” does not necessarily mean “colleagues at the same company.” All 305 cases were coded as relationships that began through a workplace context. The origin tag alone does not establish that both people had the same employer, held equivalent roles, or were still working together when the incident occurred. A workplace connection can include coworkers, a manager and subordinate, employees of different organizations, contractors, customers, clients, vendors, or another work-linked introduction. RelationWatch does not yet encode employer identity and role pairing consistently enough to calculate a same-company-coworker total from this tag. The chart instead shows each case’s separate primary relationship status—such as married, dating, live-in, extramarital, or separated. “Colleague” appears only in the three records where colleague itself is the primary recorded relationship status.

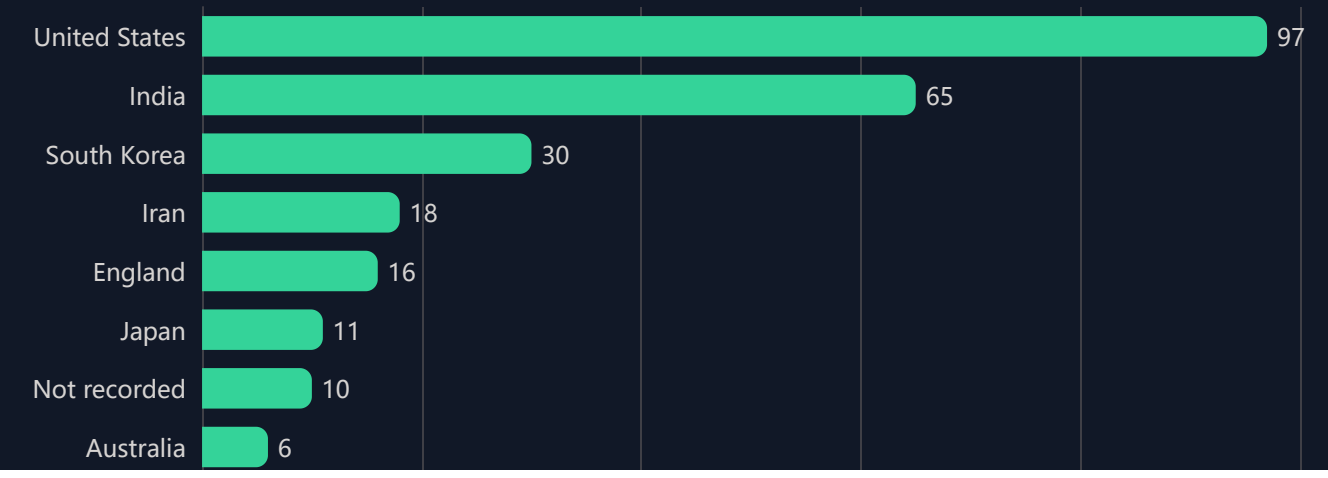

Primary incident type

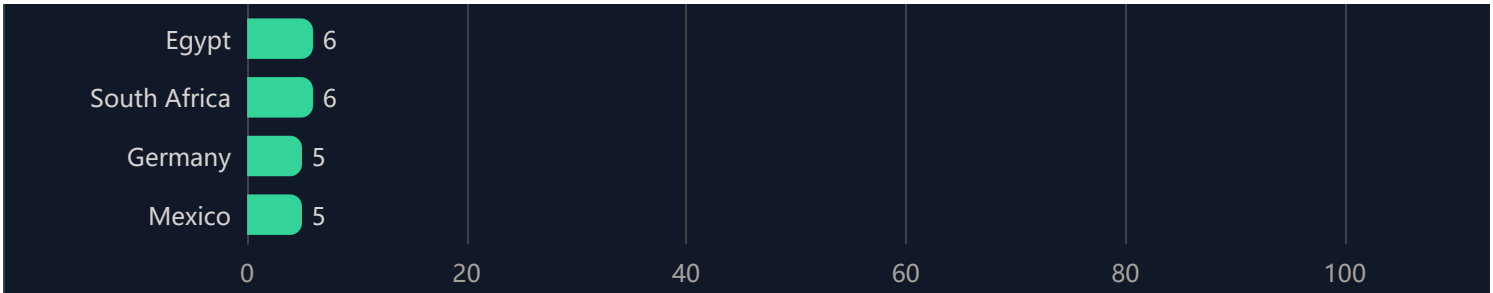

Incident types are mutually exclusive and total 305. The distribution reflects RelationWatch's serious-case selection, not risk among employees generally.

Countries most represented

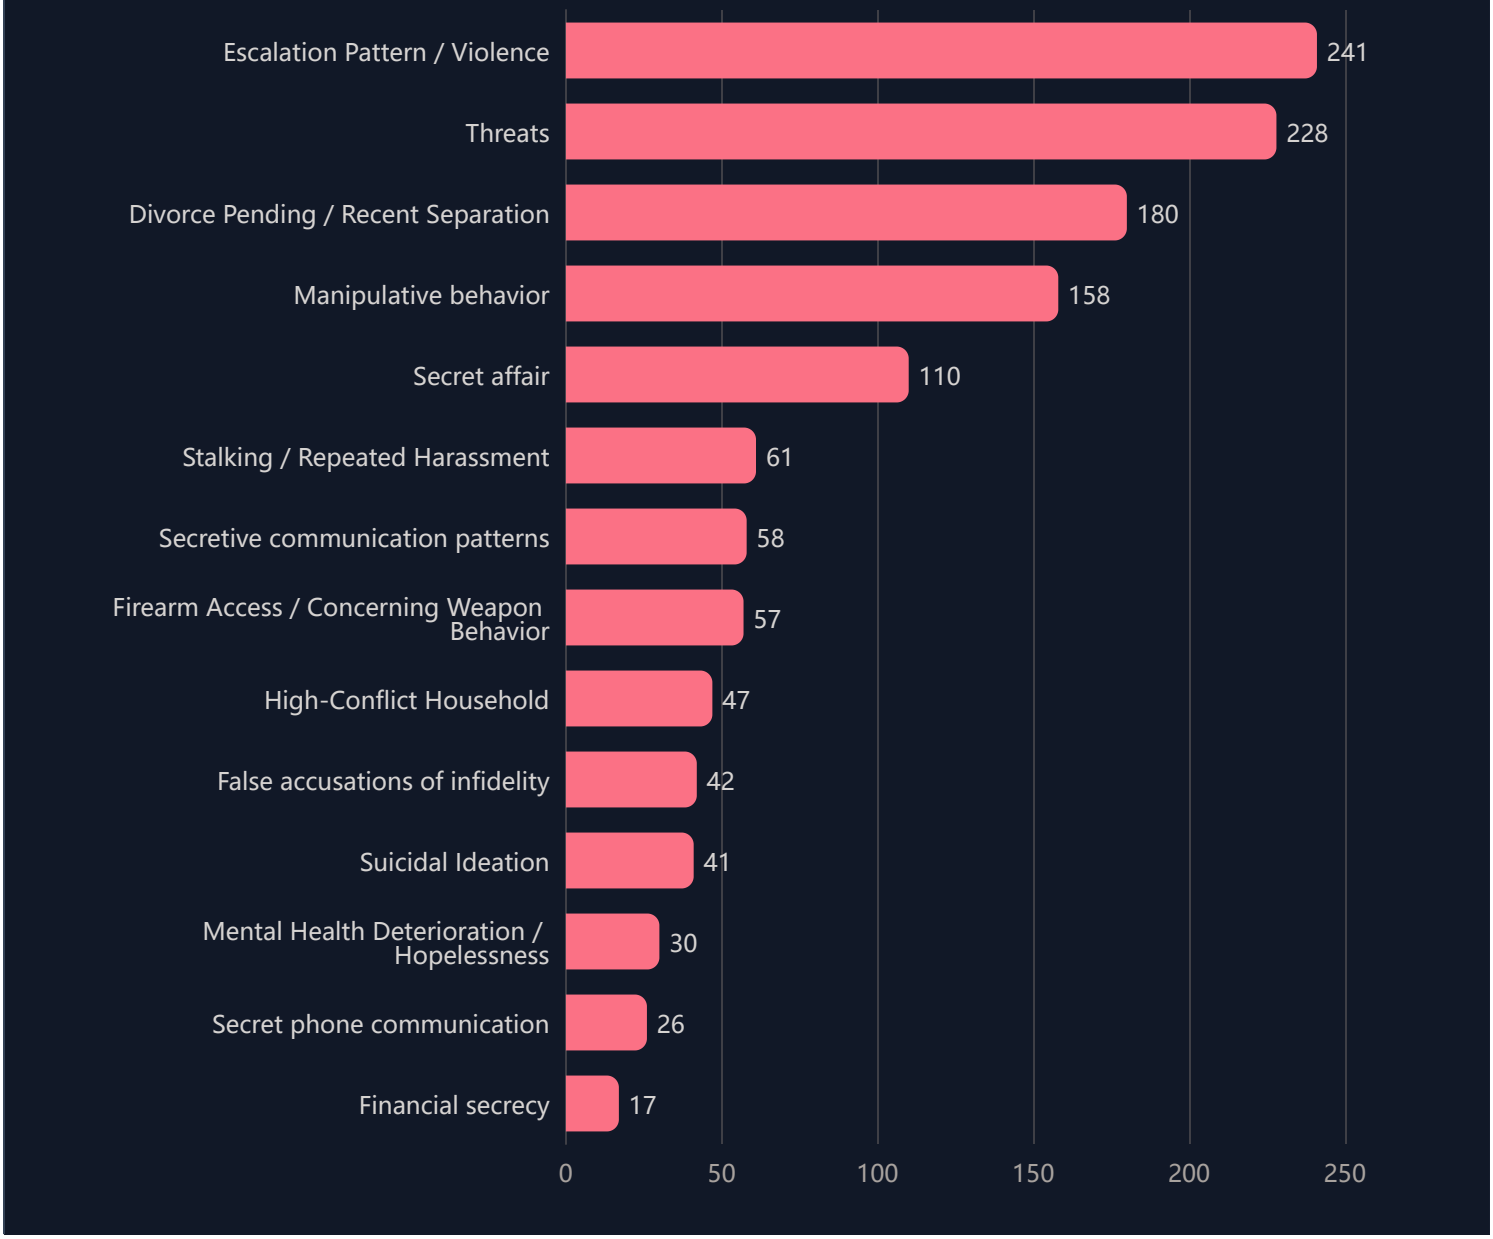

The 12 most represented country labels are shown. Coverage reflects available public sources and RelationWatch collection practices, not national prevalence.

Employer-Relevant Warning Signals

The chart uses structured red-flag tags and excludes post-incident workflow labels such as “suspects identified.” Tags can overlap. They are descriptive labels from reviewed case records, not a validated workplace risk score.

Threats and escalation

Take direct or implied threats, repeated intimidation, physical aggression, and rapid escalation seriously. Preserve reports and activate established safety procedures.

Stalking and unwanted contact

Repeated visits, waiting near entrances, monitoring schedules, persistent messages, or bypassing blocked channels are conduct concerns—not “private drama.”

Separation and rejection

A breakup or rejected advance is not itself a danger sign. Risk rises when it is accompanied by threats, coercion, surveillance, retaliation, or inability to accept boundaries.

Weapons and acute crisis

Reported weapon access, weapon displays, explicit self-harm or homicide statements, and imminent threats warrant urgent escalation to security or emergency services under local policy.

Power imbalance and retaliation

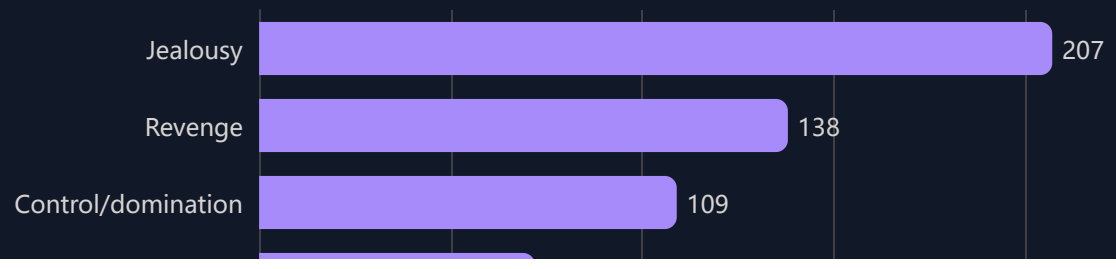

Manager–subordinate or employer–employee relationships require safeguards against coercion, favoritism, schedule retaliation, adverse assignments, and pressure to remain silent.

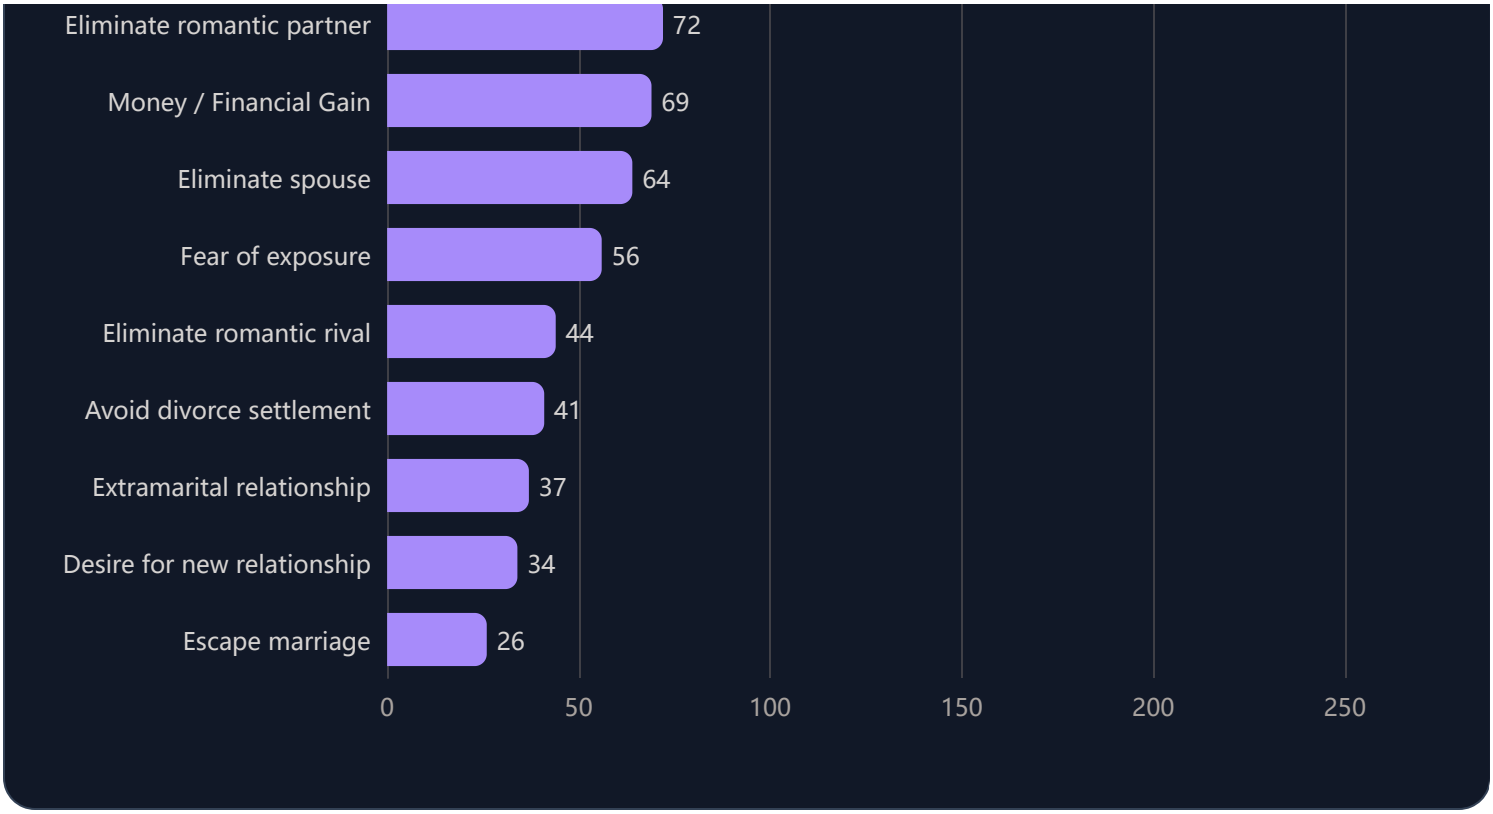

Communication secrecy

Hidden phones or messages may be relevant to a relationship conflict, but employers should focus on workplace conduct, consent, threats, harassment, data security, and policy—not police private consensual behavior.

Most recorded motives

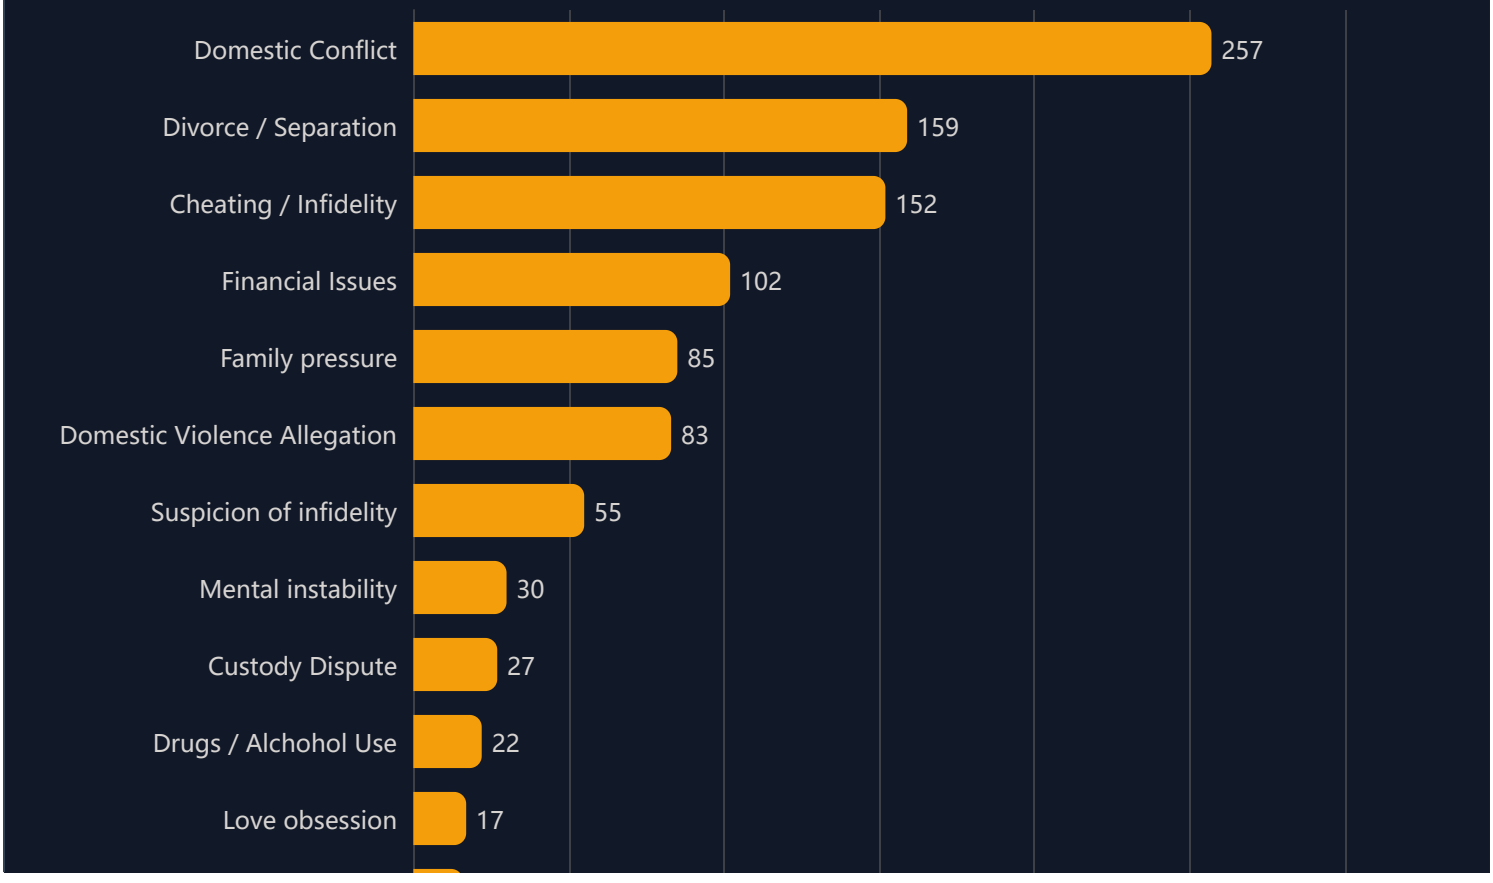

Motives are source-linked case codes and can overlap. They describe reported investigative context; employers should not diagnose motive.

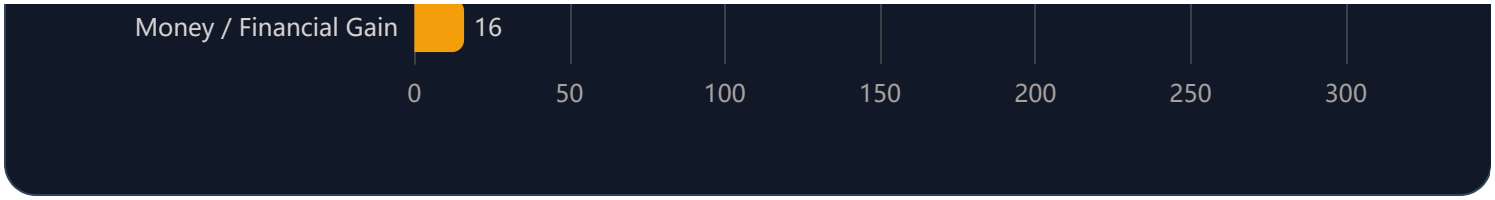

Contributing factors

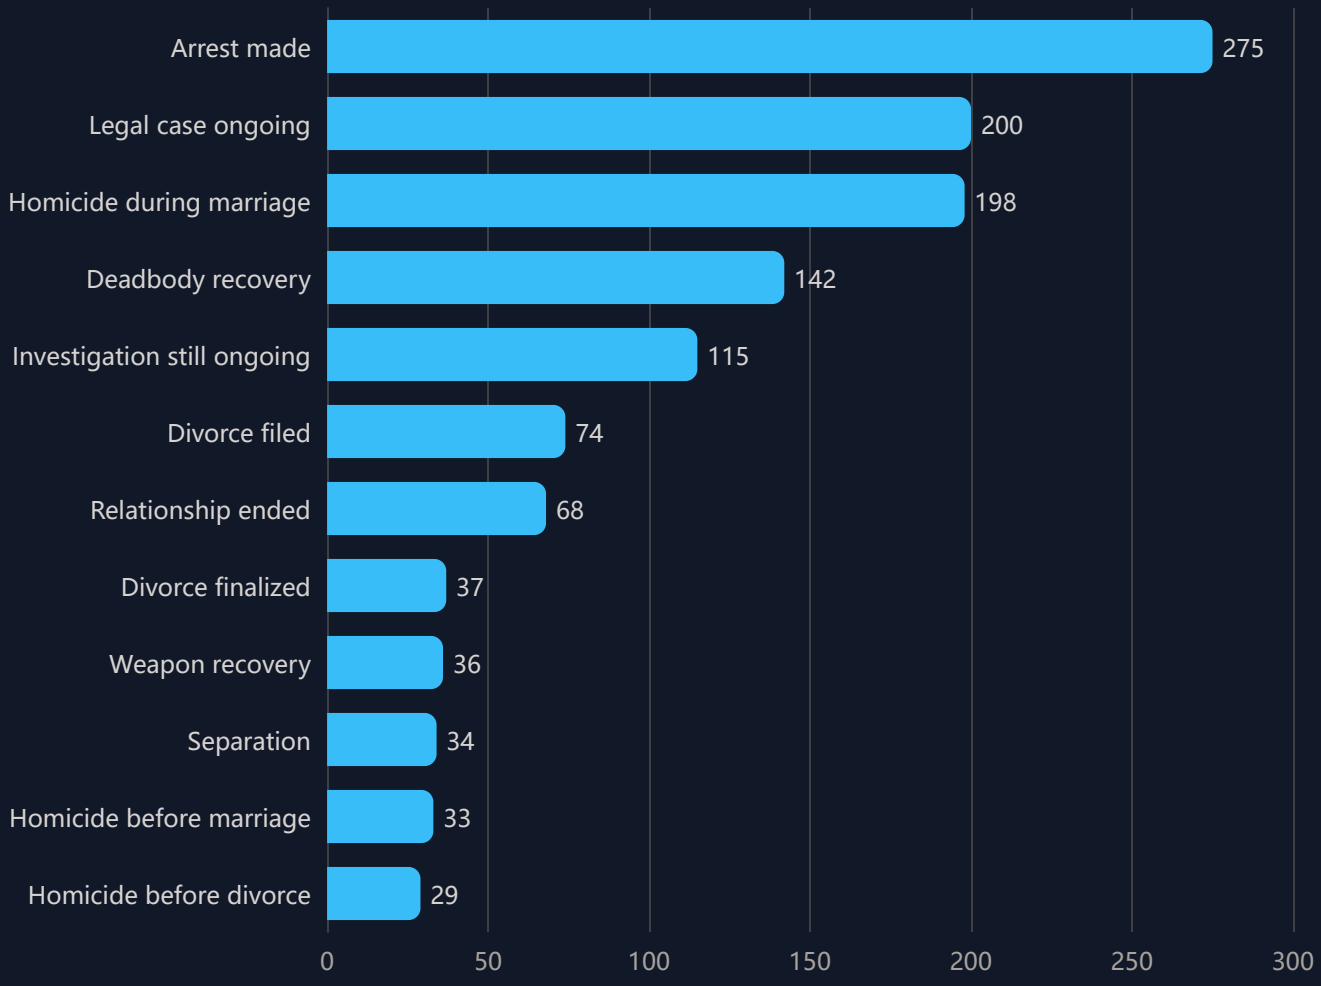

These multi-select factors overlap and do not establish causation.

Most recorded outcomes

Outcomes can overlap because one case may include an arrest, an ongoing legal case, relationship ending, and other downstream events.

What Employers Can Do

Offer more than one reporting path

Provide confidential routes through HR, security, ethics, management, and employee assistance so a worker is not forced to report through a person involved in the conflict.

Document observable behavior
Record dates, messages, witnesses, access attempts, threats, policy violations, and requested protections. Avoid labels about personality, intent, or mental illness.

Coordinate a safety plan
With the affected worker's input where possible, consider reception alerts, parking escorts, schedule or workstation changes, badge controls, remote-work options, and a designated contact.

Respond to retaliation
Separate consensual-relationship disclosure from misconduct. Investigate coercion, harassment, threats, retaliation, favoritism, and misuse of supervisory authority consistently.

Protect location and schedule data
Limit unnecessary disclosure of shifts, travel, phone numbers, home addresses, and access credentials—especially after stalking or threat reports.

Escalate imminent danger
Do not ask an employee or manager to mediate a credible imminent threat alone. Use emergency services, trained security, and applicable workplace-violence protocols.

> Do not use this brief to screen out applicants, punish lawful relationships, or profile employees. Use it to improve reporting, boundary enforcement, documentation, safety planning, and response to observable threatening or harassing conduct.

Full 305-Record Workplace Cohort

All records in the fixed snapshot are shown below. Search by case, country, relationship status, incident type, motive, or red flag. Structured motives and red flags can overlap. 305 records (100.0%) have a direct external source link in this table; every title links to its RelationWatch case page.
